The tale of two cats.

There was a sow who knew how to sow. she bought some new seeds to make her flower garden grow.
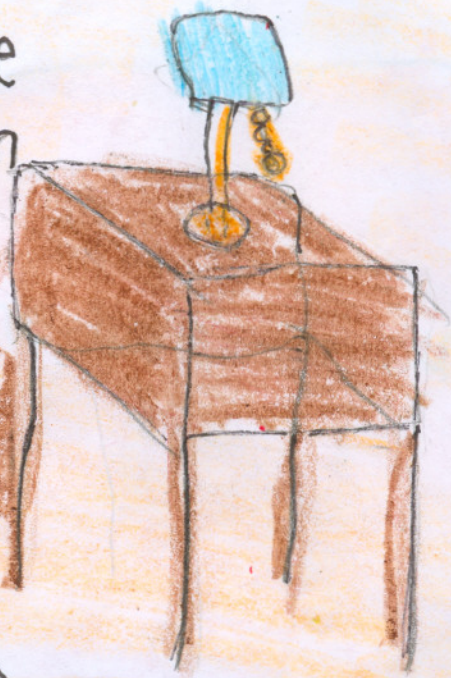
flower seeds

She had a son who worked all day in the sun with her. The sun was red hot. so he went inside and read a book.



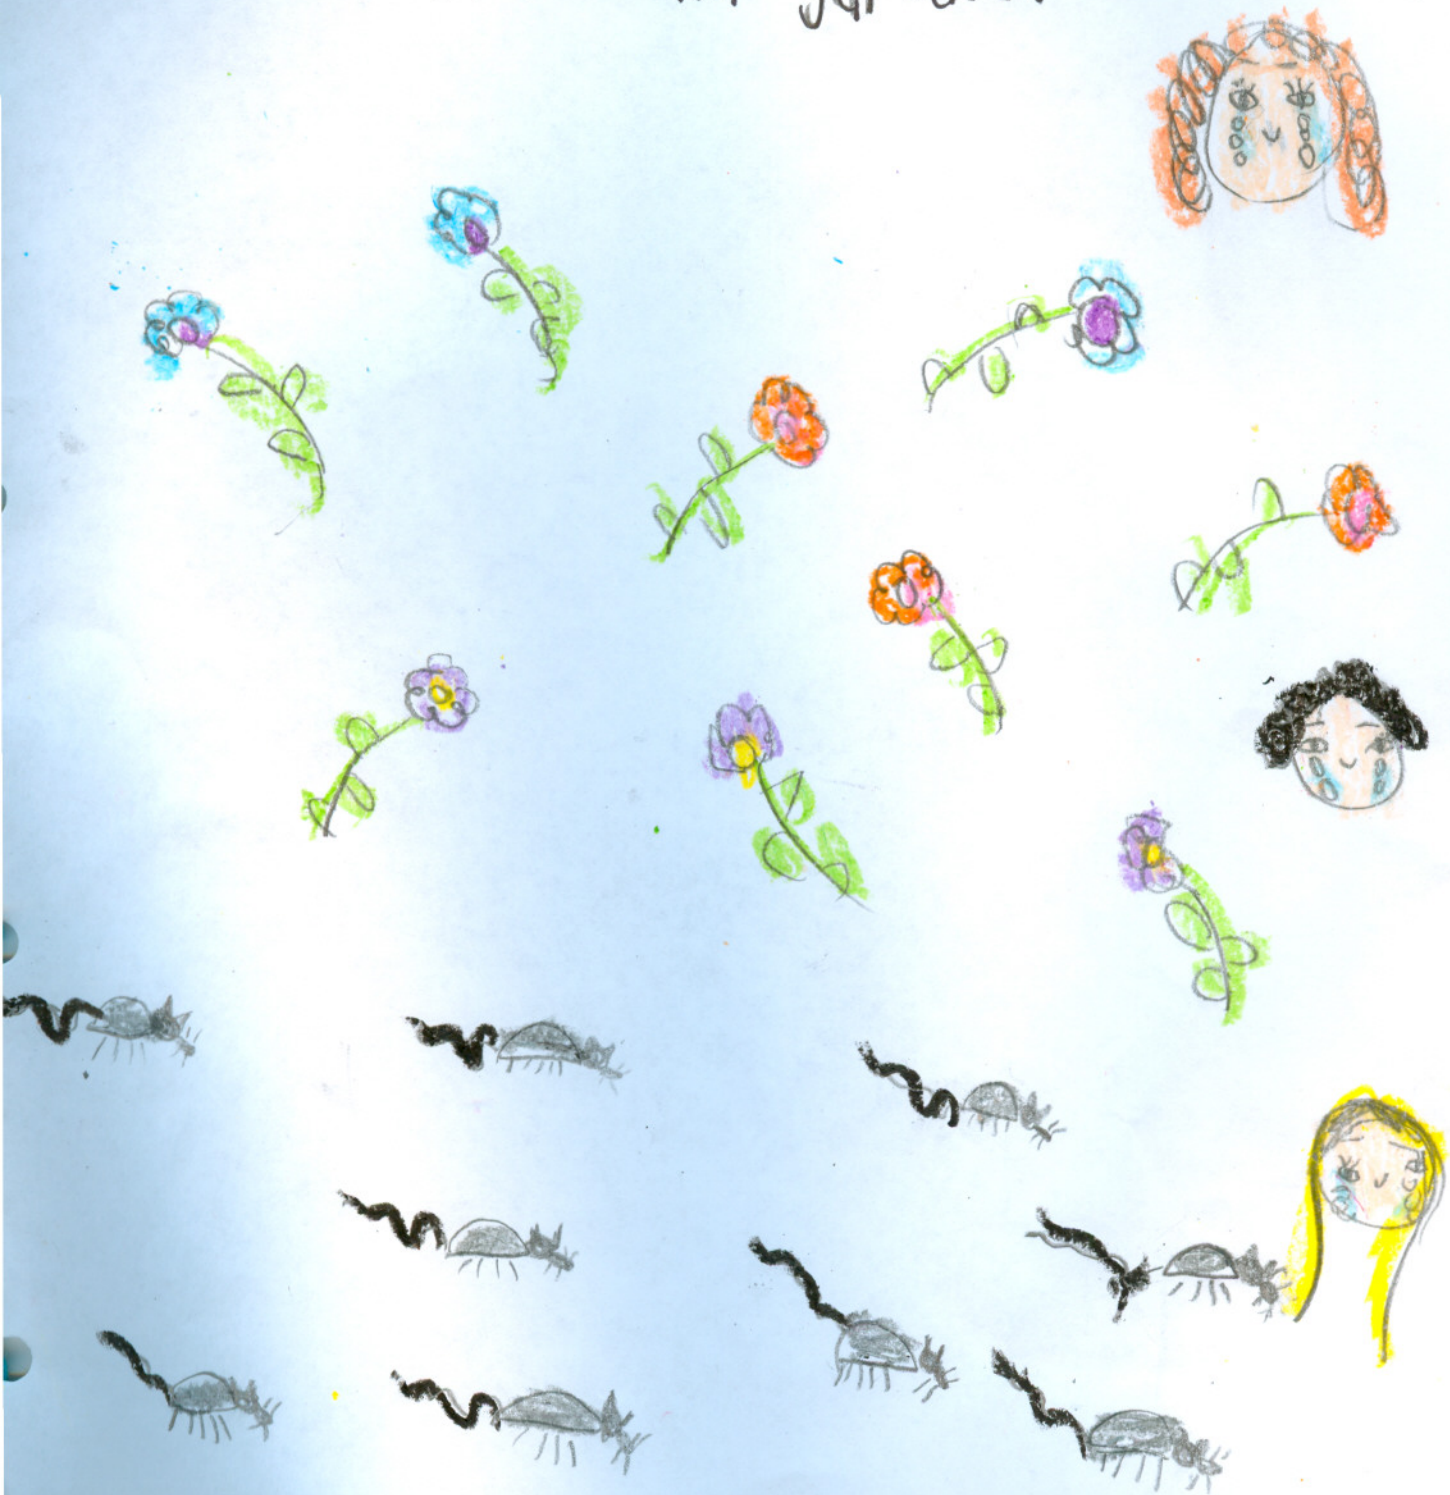
The name of the book was the horse that was hoarse.

And the hare without hair.

Reading the book the son became so tired. He fell into a daze for days. He dreamt of the horse and hare that reigned over a town where the sky always rained.

Because the hare and horse where so lazy the mice of the rainy town teamed up and teamed the town.

The mice ran all over the town having a ball. It made all the people bawl for the mice had ruined all their flower gardens.



The People prayed for help.
All of a sudden two cats appeared.
They preyed on the mice.

The people realized how weak the town was with the hare and the horse being the queen and king. within a week the people made the cats their rulers.

So when the pig woke up he went right back to work. So the mordl of that story is what you sow is what you reap.